Radio Reports Conflict on Who Is in Control of South Yemen

A Bahrain-based news agency quoted reliable sources in North Yemen today as saying President Ali Nasser Mohammed had returned to war-torn South Yemen and that his forces were in control of most of the pro-Soviet country.

The Gulf News Agency said the sources in San'a, North Yemen's capital, indicated loyalists had assumed control of the South Yemeni capital of Aden, while rebels led by former President Abdul-Fattah Ismail were "entrenched in two provinces."

Fighting between Marxist factions in the country on the Arabian Peninsula's southern tip broke out on Jan. 13, apparently after a coup attempt by hardliners opposed to Mohammed's reported desire to liberalize the economy and improve relations with pro-Western Arab countries.

On Sunday, the Gulf News Agency said a radio station which claimed to be transmitting from Aden on behalf of an unidentified new leadership broadcast a statement indicating the rebels had ousted the president.

It quoted the radio as accusing Mohammed of irresponsibility and dictatorship, and saying he had tried to "physically liquidate" members of the ruling Yemeni Socialist Party's Political Bureau and undermine state institutions.

Today, however, the Gulf News Agency said its San'a sources indicated the the rebel station was operating from the northern province of Lahej, and not from Aden.

Mohammed was reported Saturday to have flown to the Marxist African nation of Ethiopia from Aden. A radio station in Addis Ababa, the Ethiopian capital, said in a broadcast monitored in London that Mohammed had left Addis Ababa for "home" Sunday following a "stopover."

Moslems Bracing for Withdrawal Of Support to Lebanon's Gemayel

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Syrian-backed Moslem politicians prepared today to stop all cooperation with President Amin Gemayel as militia forces clashed and military sources reported major troop buildups along key confrontation lines.

Lebanese military sources said Moslem Druze and other militia units were seen massing in the mountains east of Beirut, including the region above Bikfaya, Gemayel's mountain stronghold 11 miles northeast of the capital.

A similar buildup was spotted around Souk el Gharb, a Lebanese army garrison seven miles south-east of Beirut.

On the political front, Moslem politicians geared to stop cooperating with Gemayel — the Christian leader they blame for the collapse of a Syrian-backed Christian-Moslem militia peace agreement signed in Damascus Dec. 28.

Karami and a number of other Moslem leaders visited Damascus over the weekend to coordinate the boycott with Syrian officials.

Gemayel's backers and pro-Syrian militias, infuriated by the bloody overthrow of Christian Lebanese Forces militia commander Elie Hobeika, have been fighting for five days.
